NRIOM Fosters Research Around the Globe

NASHVILLE--- NRIOM is an international organization that works with a wide range of physicians to advance the standards of patient care and establish best practice guidelines through evidence based research.

NRIOM, or National Research Independent Operations Management, collaborates extensively with partner companies NOC2 Healthcare and C3 Healthcare, both of which act as networks for surgeons. By accessing this pool of surgeons, NRIOM allows them to focus their research in areas they believe most beneficial for patients and the healthcare industry. NRIOM analyzes the data generated from the surgeons' research to open up access and reimbursement for emerging treatment pathways, surgical procedures and medical devices.

A dedication to research that meets the criteria of the scientific community and improves patient care has established NRIOM as an international research leader in the healthcare industry. By creating a medium through which physicians can commodify intellectual property, NRIOM has tapped into the greatest resource for medical innovation: surgeons with unparalleled medical knowledge.

Christina Cook, PhD, who has acted in senior executive roles with various national and international healthcare companies for over 15 years, founded NRIOM. Risa Tyo, PharmD, leads the executive team. Christina and Risa have played crucial roles in establishing NRIOM's principles and protocols. NRIOM remains dedicated to advancing patient care and surgical innovation. By providing physicians an avenue to conduct research, NRIOM harnesses the world's premier medical minds to establish new, better standards of practice and care to the ultimate benefit of the patient.
